Fionnuala Lennon, Homes England

Homes England: what we do

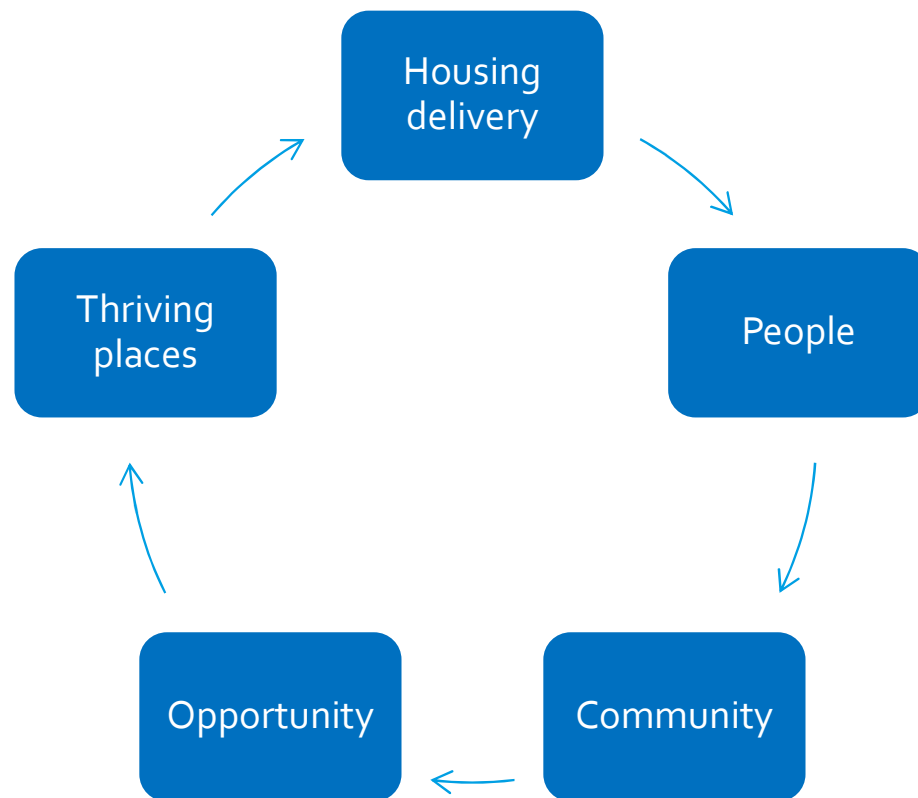

- We are the government's housing and regeneration agency
- We support the delivery of quality housing supply and placemaking, helping to create jobs and drive local economic growth
- We bridge local places and the private sector to deliver homes and support people, places and local economies through the built environment

Homes England: how we do it

We improve the supply and quality of housing while creating and developing communities across England through:

- Delivery of programmes like the Shared Ownership and Affordable Homes Programme and the Affordable Homes Programme
- Intervention in the housebuilding market, deliver infrastructure, and unlock land for development, ensuring that the right types of tenures and homes are delivered where they are needed using a range of financial tools, including debt, equity, grant, and guarantee schemes
- Championing quality, good design and sustainability

Housing delivery & place-making

Place-making is about more than the physical environment created; it is also about enhancing & building communities
